DESOLATION.

Dreadful Work of the Drought in Illinois and Wisconsin.

No Sinking Rain Since March—Public Prayers Offered for a Shower.

CHICAGO, July 1.—No such drought as now prevails has existed in Illinois and Wisconsin for many years. The roads are sandy deep with dust, the pastures are brown, and the leaves on forest and shade trees are shriveled up and each hot breath of air from the cloudless horizon drives them away. Cereals have run dry, and the water in the larger streams is at a lower stage than was ever known before. There has not been a soaking rain in this part of the country since March. Two showers in April and one each in May and June had but a temporary effect on crops. Stunted yellow spears bending disconsolately over immense beds of dust are the only evidence that the farmers sowed any corn this year.

The leaves of the fruit trees are falling and the fruit, which promised to be plenty, is wrinkled and dried to the stem. Raspberries bushes look as though they were producing a crop of shot, so infinitesimally small and hard are the berries. The drought has become a terrible pestilence, and public prayers are being offered for rain.

The fences along the country roads and the dead walls of the villages are plastered with huge bills calling for special services at the district school houses and churches. Fires are burning in the woods, and pastures for miles around are scorched. The farmers have lost many cattle in these fires, which seem to spring up in a dozen places at once. Reports from all parts of Henry and adjoining counties tell of intense suffering from the drought. The drinking water in many towns has been polluted and the white beds of the creeks are covered with decaying fish. The drought in the northern and central tiers of counties of Illinois is not any more serious than it is in Wisconsin. The Badger State is literally burning up, and fruit and crops are nearly destroyed. Reports from Northwestern Iowa state that the drought has been broken.

PRECOCIOUS KID.

A Ten-Year-Old Boy Burns Two School-Houses and Attempts a Third Because He Didn't Like the Teacher.

QUINCY, Ill., June 30.—Sunday night three weeks ago Stoneywood Academy, nine miles from here, was burned by an incendiary. No clue could be found to the guilty party. Determined to keep up their school, the neighbors met and improvised a school-house out of an out-house on Mr. Repell's plantation, and after one week's occupation his house was also burned by an incendiary in the night time.

The neighbors met again and converted a house on Mr. Rountree's place into an academy, and school was being held there. This morning about two o'clock Mr. Hill, Rountree's tenant, was awakened by the barking of his dogs and urgent yells for help. He went out and following the sound of the voice he came upon John Croft, a boy not over ten years old and very small for his age. He had a bundle of light wood splinters, some partly consumed, and the dogs had him at a short distance from the school-house.

He was charged with the burning of the school-house, and Croft confessed that he had burned both academies, and that he had come to burn the third. He said he was not afraid to get up and come a mile through the woods and swamp, and that he prepared the splinters on the afternoon before. His reason for the acts was that he was opposed to going to school to Mr. Williams, and that his parents made him go, and that he had burned the other two houses and was going to burn the third in order to keep from going.
